"Before I returned to where my sister was standing she started over to show me one of the handkerchiefs worth IS cents and to get money from me with which to pay for it. Before she could speak to me, a big man rudely grabbed my sister's arm and in a manner which frightened her and stirred me to anger, declared she was trying to steal the handkerchief. I remonstrated with him, but he acted in an abusive fashion and declared before a crowd that my sister was a thief and he would have her arrested. I afterward learned that this man was a detective on duty in the store. My sister was compelled to go upstairs and when she was searched they found nothing on her.
